SMELTERS INCREASING

*Over 1,000,000 of Ore to be Mined
This Year*

Over a million tons of ore will be mined during 1902 in the various camps scattered throughout East and West Kootenay districts and the southeastern corner of Yale districts. The ore carries gold, silver, copper, and lead, and runs all the way from $3.75 to $200 a ton in values. The bulk of it is smelted at Nelson, Trail, Grand Forks, Greenwood, and Boundary Falls, towns situated in British Columbia and within easy reach of the mines. The tonnage that is not smelted at the above-named places is shipped to the smelters at Northport, Everett, Tacoma, and San Francisco, in the United States. A considerable percentage of the total is classed as free-milling gold ore, and is treated at stamp mills at the mines.

The smelter at Nelson is running two lead stacks; the Trail smelter is running one lead stack and two copper furnaces; the Grand Forks smelter has four copper furnaces, the Greenwood smelter two, and the Boundary Falls smelter one.

A smelter is under way at Marysville, in East Kootenay, and advices from there are that it will be in operation by the middle of November. The capacity of the smelter at Grand Forks is to be increased by two furnaces, which will make six in all, with a daily capacity of about 2,000. The Greenwood smelter, it is also said, is to be increased by two furnaces. The smelter at Boundary

Ontario's Minerals.

A statement issued by the Ontario bureau of mines shows that the value of provincial metalliferous products for the first half of the present year, ending June 30, was $2,302,722, compared with $1,438,530, for the corresponding period last year; and $824,076 for the first six months of 1907.

months of 1900. There were the following increases: Gold, 516 ounces, value $11,968. Copper, 377 tons, value $64,771. Nickel, 121 tons, $20,256. Iron ore, 134,212 tons, $226,680. Soft iron, 14,302 tons, $180,410.

Arsenic, 108,916 pounds, $2088. Silver showed a decrease of 5230 ounces in weight, and $8016 in value. The gains in nickel and copper were large, both in quantity and value. By far the larger proportion of iron ore raised in the province comes from the Helen mine in Michigan district, which is being worked on an extensive scale. A considerable part of the product is exported to the home market.

Dr. Rouleau of Calgary paid a business trip to Golden this week.

WILMER, B.C., THURSDAY, OCT. 16, 1902.

All over the world President Roosevelt's speeches have been received with satisfaction, showing that he realizes the need for national control of the trusts, which have assumed proportions so gigantic in the United States. Nowhere have these industrial and commercial combinations been developed so largely and nowhere have they in their practical working come closer to the daily life of the people. Very recent experience, in the matter of the beef trust, taught the ordinary citizen how real may be his interest in the unrestricted operation of the trust system. Hence the keen and general approval which is given to Mr. Roosevelt when he declares that these combinations have reached a magnitude and power that require control by some higher authority, and that this authority must be found, not in the legislation and supervision of the various states, but in the national government. This is the special feature of his proposal and the change it involves should meet with popular approval, says the Colonist.

President Roosevelt stands for a policy, which, as he must have known as well as any of his critics, is obnoxious to very influential people of his own party. The trust magnates largely finance the Republican organization. The party managers are dismayed and outraged by his new departure. They would leave such talk to the Democrats, who are at present rather demoralized. But Mr. Roosevelt really appeals to men of all parties. He may risk breaking up his own party, as it stands, but he may be doing the best thing to build up on a better basis.

If companies everywhere would steadily improve the position of the men who make the wealth, the days of strikes and troubles would quickly pass. But not five per cent of managers so truly appreciate their position, and it is very doubtful if they will in the near or far-off future.

Hence the work people and all those of the consuming class who do not labor in the ranks of paid workmen, as well as many who are as shareholders interested in large trusts and corporations, see clearly that injustice is done to the laborers in many cases; and the present system carries with it no likely solution of the trouble.

Moreover, the labor unions while, when honestly managed in the spirit of fair play and without the feeling of vengeance, they tend in the direction of facing all the people to see and feel there is much that is radically wrong in the labor world, fail and must fail to accomplish a permanent solution.

This arises from the fact that these unions too far ignore too many persons and things. They overlook the fact that there is a larger class of workers outside than inside the unions. They fail to see that they never can force this large outside class into their ranks by clubs, brickbats and revolvers. Something seldom attempt in Canada. They seem to overlook the fact that even in their ranks injustice arises to the less skilled unionists, who with working units of worth in hand and head are forced to ask pay equal to that of better men. The result is that the less able get less work and they dare not lower their wage to their real working worth. Again the men of highest worth are held down to the average pay of the average man, and are not allowed pay according to merit. This refers to men in similar callings.

Prof. E. Ollun says that labor organizations too frequently overlook the consumer, the state of trade, supply and demand, and especially outside cheap competing labor. And yet the labor unions are being thought to turn itself to their problems; are trying to correct errors of the past; are earnestly seeking to throw off the warts and excrescences too often attached to them; are feeling their way towards better solutions than the past has produced and are wisely growing more socialistic than heretofore.

No sane man should fight the moderate, wiser and many upward tendencies of the labor unions. But every man of sense and heart should help to clean out of them the mark too often attached. In Canada these unions are undoubtedly growing, evolving upward and increasing both in wisdom and power. This should be a pleasure to all as the result is less striking and waste, with better feeling between masters and men.

We are a good union formed in this district it would do great good for many of the trivial matters which cause so much trouble would then be settled amicably.

SKY PILOTS WHO KNOCK

One Divine Says B. C. Is As Black As Hell—Another Sees Little Future for The Island.

Rev. J. E. B. Johnson says in the Presbyterian, "A magazine for the home": "Morally, there are far greater problems than the Chinese question. Few people in British Columbia live in rural communities as the many do to the east of us. Outside of communities, therefore, such as the Fraser River Valley and the Okanagan Valley we must not look for rural conditions. Civic conditions prevail in British Columbia and civic conditions world-wide are a more serious problem than rural conditions especially in the sphere of religion and morality. Further, these civic conditions are attended in the west by what is termed the 'wide open policy.' This is one of the most serious problems that is known. It cannot be described. It is worse than all deception. It is darker than death; it is black as hell. A wide open town means that the prevailing public sentiment is opposed to purity of life and integrity of character; it means that honor and virtue are in the market in exchange for dollars and cents; it means the loss and ruin of the young with the strong crying and howling of the night. Now when we remember that the wide open town is largely prevalent in the Interior we can see how dark the conditions are."

Rev. T. S. McWilliams, D.D., pastor of the American Presbyterian church, Montreal, recently took a trip to inspect the home mission work on Vancouver Island, and he is quoted in the Home on Pseudotopia as saying: "He does not think there is much of a future for the island. The mineral deposits and timber were mostly given to the Dominions for building a railway from Victoria to Nanaimo, and their management of these resources has been short sighted. Agriculture is impossible over most of the island, though there are kitchen-gardens around Victoria. Victoria maintains its existence principally because it is the capital, and some very exigent people think that the C. P. R. will some day run across the Strait and into Victoria the terminus. There is also the flavor of military life, which attracts many wealthy people."

Mr. McWilliams' say might be passed over as a divine is expected to be better to give much thought to things natural and if he was asked to express his opinion he would quite naturally fall into line with the rest of the east and give British Columbia a kick down the hill. He should prospect for things—only spiritual, and when he finds a "natural" that live someone to assay it before he ships it to the mill.

But with the other god it is different. Mr. Robertson deals with the subject that he is supposed to know something about the title "Hell," qualifies him, and he should know the formation of the ground he is working on. But when he says, "It is darker than death, it is black as hell," one must conclude he is a tenderfoot. The people of B.C., certainly cannot be classed as all saints, but at the same time they are no worse than the people of Ontario or Quebec. The "wide open policy" of the west is better than the "secret policy" of the east. Mr. Robertson's definition of "A wide open town" is wrong; it is false. The westerners were purity and virtue and is not opposed to it. The only difference between the east and west in this respect is that in the east they want to hide their sinful people and let the innocent young suffer the consequence; while in the west they prefer to let sin be seen in all its hideousness that the young may see the dangers that surround them. Take Toronto the city of churches where a young man can scarce walk about for an hour without being invited into a house where purity is unknown; while in any western city he would never or seldom be asked in the same manner. Consequently, the brute in man does not wreck the lives of innocent girls in the west to the extent it does in the east.

The fact is that a man's wife, sons and daughters are more safe from crime and the influence of sin in the west than in the east, for they know where it is to be found and can be kept away, while in the east the vilest sinners are found any where and every where clothed in the best raiment.

The reverend gentleman says, "It means honor and virtue are in the market for dollars and cents." It is even worse in the east and if he would look around he would find thousands who have not even dollars and cents for the loss of honor and virtue, while their brutal, cowardly, villainous and treacherous accomplices occupy front pews and high places.

If these divines want to help the west they must not be "knockers," but send out their best men of wide thought.

ACT.

It is well to keep from sinful ways.

To stun the view of the weak;

And to cause and public praise;

Be of the things that we would seek

We may not merely sit and wait

Expecting since we do no wrong,

That others may pronounce us great,

That we may beam above the throng.

It is well to never do evil deeds

But if causes and public praise;

Be of the things that we would seek

In gaining heights we long to reach

Has more to do than just to live

Furnished by sin that taint the throng

The world has few rewards to give

To him who merely does no wrong.
